of civilities between resident and official people, and to see the warm welcome of Washington homes to both denizens and strangers. Not often has a pleasant New Year's Day been given us. Yesterday's weather was something worth talking about, Not that it was exactly New Year's Day, but then it was left over, as it were, untonched from Sunday, and everybody forgot that it was the second day of 1882. There was one feature of the day which had its advantages, albeit some will bemoan the good old days when things were so much different. This feature was osbriety. The young gentlemen ringing from nineteen to twenty-five, who have, in years past, appeared rather limp and feeble at the knees after about three o'clock, stood firmly on their pins yesterday. This was because so large a proportion of the ladies, by general consent, omitted wines and all other intoxicating beverages from their entertainments.

At the White House never did the people meet a more courily or gracious President. He was patience itself, greeting with kindness and interest every person who deemed it worth his or her while to call.

The day was a pleasant halt in the long march, and everybody and everybed was a firm of the ladies, by general consent, and everybed and everybed and everybed and everybed and everybed and everybed and every beautiful and the even and all other intoxicating beverages from their entertainments.

this year of unusual intensity. The people of the several Congressional districts in all of the States will be called upon to choose members of the next Congress, whose terms will commence March 4, 1883. The close districts will be warmly contested, and in the Southern States many districts will the Southern States many districts will be fought over which have for several years been surrendered to the Bourbons without struggle. The uprising in Virginia will bear fruit in other portions of the South. The Democrats who are lired of the cheating, perjury, and bulldozing by which alone they maintain the ascendancy in many districts, will revolt against the Bourbon organization. It will be the duty of the white and black Republicans, where the Bourbons bear pended for five years, and the result is that there is now go much of genuine acquiescence in the amendments to the Constitution that the ex-confederates in many districts will furnish all the force necessary to overcome resistance to the laws. Every law and order man is a Republican without knowing it. And so every anti-Bourbonby which we mean every Democrat who is unwilling to sustain fraud and violence in elections for party success-every anti-Bourbon is as good a Republican as this country now needs. We are not now divided on slavery extension, rebellion. abolition, or force-bills. These are gone with the things that happened before the flood. Living, breathing patriotism, respect for law, and pride of countrythese constitute the best political creed of true Republicanism. Beware of treason among Republicans, showing itself in dealings with the Bourbons to help them rally their bewildered faces. The Ad-rally their bewildered faces. The Administration will not be used in this direction.

The Bourbons will not have the Federal offices at their disposal in the South under President Arthur. Republicans who have been holding Bourbon horses in consideration of certificates of good character to be used here as passports to Federal appointments will find the times changed. The four Republican postmasters in a single congressional district of a Southern State, which could be named, will be recruited, and Democrats now in office will take to better business than holding office under a "radical" administration.

If the civil-service reform, which means hatred of certain leaders in the Republican administration.

If the civil-service reform which means hatred of certain leaders in the Republican aparty and the proscription of their friends, can pass moster in restlictic circles why may we not inaugurate a civil-service reform which shall mean proscription of the Bourbons, who have been will be provided down by the people at six successive presidential elections? It is in this spirit that Republicans must approach the coming struggle for the ascendancy in the next House of Representatives.

Mone burgharies have been committed in this city during the past year than in any other city of its size in the Union. This should be an instructive lesson for Congress and the District authorities.

A Happy Yesterday.

Washington is a delightful, cleanly, cheery, and hospitable city. Yesterday sine was at her best. It was something to be proud of to see the great interchange of civilities between resident and official people, and to see the warm welcome of Washington homes to both denizers who deemed it worth his or her while to call.

The day was a pleasant halt in the long march, and eyerybody and everybody's wife rested and refused to be worried. In the struggles and excitements which make up so large a portion of the national life it is well that long custom makes the opening day of the year a day of rest, recreation, and pleasant reunions.

To-day the world moves on again—wedding marches, funeral dirges, gains and losses, all go on as before. ISSI was a stormy year. Let us hope the present one may be compensatingly peaceful.

The Congressional Elections of 1882. It will not do for us to mellow down in these infant days of the New Year into an idea that the millennium has arrived. There will be political struggles this year of unusual intensity. Por the sake of the girl, if for no other reason, it is most devoutly hoped that the third boat, with the gallant lieutenant and his brother officers, will yet be saved.

This is probably one of the saddest stories that has ever been chronicled on the Pacific coast. The young lady's sad history is very similar to Lady Franklin's, and she will undoubtedly receive great sympathly from the feminine portion of the whole country.—Los Angeles Times.

The young lady is aware by this time that her lover, who is a resident of Washington, is safe, and has telegraphed from Russi to his parents, now living in Georgetown, that a letter from him is on its way here.]

SONG.

For all that we have said, Sweet, And all that we have done, Our eyes are still afraid, Sweet, To face to morrow's sim.

We know that this must be, Love, The hour when first we last And yet we cannot see, Love, How each may each forget.

To marrow, then, we part, Love, And go our separate ways, and sander heart from heart, Love, And attoder face from face And now what does it bring, Dear,

This great leve, at the end?
A song for me to sing, Dear,
Sad days for you to spend.

The Methods of T. L. James-Will Wood Ward Disgorge? To the Editor of THE REPUBLICAN:

The Methods of The Emperations:

In a recent issue of The Emperations you called attention to the fact that the distinguished reformer, who is about to gladden the hearts of every gentleman under the roof of the Post-Office building, by getting out from under it himself, had secepted the resignation of Van Wormer, to take effect January 31, thus leaving Judge Howe without a chief clerk for the whole of the present month. Mr. James has now, I understand, appointed P. H. Woodward and Jerome J. Hinds four noble frairum) as inspectors of the Post-Office Department, in order to further handicap the incaming Post-master-General. Did he fear that Judge Howe might leave those two delectable gentlemen out in the cold, that he thus hastens to reappoint them? In this connection it would be well to inquire whether Detective Woodward has refunded to the Government the $0 per diem which he has been drawing from the Department, contrary to the express provision of the law.

THE RECORDS WILL SHOW that he has certified "moon honor" to having been "actually travelling" upon business of the Department since last April (and this is certified to by T. L. James), and that he has received 50 per day for such actual travelling, when every-body knows, and James I hows better than any-body else, that Woodward has not traveled a day on business of the Department. The attention of the new Postmaster-General will, of course, be called to this salpable violation of law, and Mr. Woodward will be required to the resumester-General will, of course, be called to this matter, but Mr. James has made no sign. Postmaster-General will, of course, be called to this matter, but Mr. James has made no sign. Postmaster-General will be able to see this point, which James did not want to see, and the Treasury will soon be several bundred dollars richer than it is now. He will also see that J. J. Hinds, against whom the Government holds several judgments, does not draw his salary in violation of law, as he has been doing.

The Helliter of Tue Repressions:

Naval Constructor Pook.

To the Editor of The Republican:
The views of Constructor Pook are well timed, and may be deemed worthy the attention of Congress, or of those who may be called upon to consider plans and methods best calculated to produce an effective navy. When Mr. Pook was entaged in private business he became noted as the builder of the most famous American elippers, and his designs for vessels of war, received and acknowledged by foreign governments in preference to those of his competitors, gave him a roputation which has been well sustained during his connection with the Government as a naval constructor. His record shows him to be a man of progressive ideas, and your reference to him as a resily able officer, and as one having ideas of his own, will be recognized as well deserved by all who are conversant with the history of American ship building. He may justly be considered an authority on all matters pertaining to naval construction, and I would be fortunate for the people, who will have to foot the bills for this new navy, if they should have the benefit of his talents in a more controlling pesition during its construction than that he now occupies. His reputation as a thoroughly progressive and scientific officer and his well-known patriotism would afford a well grounded hope that the money would be created which would be created which

District Government Affairs.

District Government Affilirs.

The District offices on Four-and-a-half street were closed yesterday, except the burial permit office at the health department.

Great dissatisfaction is expressed by the Metropolitan police at not getting their pay for the month of December Saturday. The firemen and other District employees all received their pay, but for some reason one of the duplicate pay-rolls was not signed by the Districtantion rand the Commissioners, and although the checks were all drawn and properly signed by Commissioner Deut, no money could be paid by Mr. Dunnivan, the property clerk, who usually attends to this dury.

A New Year Marriage. A New Year Mavringe.

At St. Aloysius Church yesterday morning there was a very happy New Year's wedding, the contracting parties being Mr. John J. Fuller, one of our enterprising and popular citizens, and Miss Namie Sullivan. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Fortune, who bade the happy couple God-speed on their future voyage through life. A number of friends extended their congrutulations to Mr. and Mrs. Fuller. The bride were a hand-ome and becoming toilet of maroon-colored brocade allk, and naterwens the ordeal gracefully. After the teremony the bridal couple received their friends at No. 22 Massechusetts avenue.
